The Teflon™ Story

While working on FREON, scientists at Du Pont's Jackson Laboratory discovered that a frozen, compressed sample of tetrafluoroethylene had polymerised spontaneously to a white, waxy solid; poly-tetrafluoroethylene. Testing showed that this remarkable material was so slippery that virtually nothing would stick to it. Thus, Teflon™ was born.

The resulting Teflon™ coating is a fluorocarbon solid, meaning that it has a high molecular weight made up solely of carbon and fluorine. This means it is resistant to corrosive chemicals, doesn't absorb water, can withstand extremes of heat and cold, resists UV rays, and produces extremely low static coefficients of friction. Unlike conventional lubricants, Teflon™ minimises 'slick-slip' problems, and is particularly effective in applications requiring low speeds and light loads, making it ideal for cycle components. So exclusive is the use of Teflon™, that we are the only cycle brand in the whole of Europe to hold the license to use Teflon™ in our lubricants.
